

The FCC should not attempt to strike down or limit New Jersey's Do Not Call legislation. The New Jersey legislature has deemed it appropriate to enact a more restrictive program than the federal equivalent, and the citizens of New Jersey should have the right to enjoy this more restrictive scheme enacted by their elected representatives. The Do Not Call legislation is an unqualified boon to New Jersey residents. It has turned the home telephone from an invasive, nagging instrument of telemarketers and shills back into the important instrument of communication it once was. Don't mess with New Jersey's law. We hate telemarketers!!
